Adelchi D'Appolonia Fatally Injured Monday Morning

Had Only Been Employed Two Weeks; Inquest Held Monday Evening; Funeral Wednesday Morning.

A tragic accident occurred at McGillivray tippie on Monday morning when Adelchi D'Appolonia, aged 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. D'Appolonia, was fatally injured when he was caught between some machinery and crushed to death.

Deceased had only been employed two weeks by the company and sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances is being extended to the family in their bereavement.

An inquest, presided over by coroner A. Webster, was held on Monday evening to try and determine cause. Jury included W. Dutilleul, foreman; J. Chalmers, A. Toppino, A. Anderson, G. Hope, and L. Richards.

Witnesses heard were Wm. Hogan, tippie boss, W. Blyth and G. McDonald. These men helped extricate the youth from the machinery but were unable to shed any light as to how he came to be caught. H. Clark, engineer, explained the location of the machinery and various guards which protected the workmen. H. Hulbert, pit boss, identified deceased. Ewan Morgan, mines inspector, questioned witnesses. Dr. C. Rose gave cause of death.

The jury returned with the following verdict: Adelchi D'Appolonia came to his death about 8.40 a.m. July 28, 1941, at McGillivray mine tippie while on duty through accidentally being crushed between a conveyor belt and a chute with no blame attached to anyone.

The funeral was held from the family residence Wednesday morning to the Holy Ghost Catholic church where Rev. Father Sullivan conducted the service. The pallbearers were Messrs. John Ondrus, Mike and Morrow Kubica, Wilbert Raymond, Stanley Kwasney, and Alveno Fabra. Internment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

Surviving are Mr. and Mrs. Ed. D'Appolonia, one brother and three sisters.

Pucksters Again Take Lead in Crow Ball League

Coleman Pucksters once again took over leadership in the Crow ball league by thoroughly trouncing Blairmore 20-10 in a game here Wednesday evening. Pucksters won as they pleased, leading 20-1 at the end of the seventh. Carelessness was responsible for Blairmore's big rally in the eighth which netted nine runs.

The game was featured in the fifth inning by a home run by Joyce of Coleman. Hobson did the trick for Blairmore in the eighth.

Pucksters next games will be two exhibitions against Lethbridge Galt Miners at Lethbridge next Sunday.

Batteries: Draper, Schlosser, Kanik and Kubic; Bell, Field and Sanderson.

"SERVE BY CONSERVING"—MESSAGE TO WOMEN

Ottawa, Canada—"Serve by conserving" should be the motto of the housewife in wartime declares a joint statement, issued today by the Agriculture Department and the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Canadians are asked to make sure that no fruit or vegetables go to waste this summer because they are not gathered and distributed for immediate use or for storing or preserving, the statement continued. Lack of adequate rainfall has reduced early-ripening crops, and the most efficient use must be made of the fruits and vegetables coming on the market in the months ahead.

Sugar supplies are abundant for all preserving needs, points out S. R. Noble, sugar administrator under the wartime Prices and Trade Board, despite the wartime disruption of many of the shipping facilities on which Canada normally depends.

Letter from Overseas

July 14th, 1941

Dear Alec:—

Well I will try again and this time I'll send it airmail. This is the fourth time I have written and I presume you have not received any of them or I would have had a reply.

Well how is everything in Coleman, and how are all the boys at the Legion. I had quite a coincident the other day, we were issued with a pair of socks from the Salvation Army and inside them was a card with verses of Scripture and the knitter's address which was Mrs. A. E. Knowles, Coleman, Alberta.

I hope the campaign for Coleman is very satisfactory. If you should see Dick Fisher tell him that I am sending him a letter. Is your son still in Coleman or is he away?

Well I must close with all the best for yourself and family and the Legion.

Yours truly,

George Evans.

Mr. Alec Easton states this is the first letter he has received from George.

Dear Friends:

Many thanks for cigarettes. I sure appreciate same and I am sure the rest of the boys over here are of the same mind as myself. The boys from Coleman are all getting along swell; we hope to move to the coast in the next few days, so rest assured that if an invasion attempt is made by Jerry, he will get a hot reception. Well, cheerio, and the best to all at home. Thumbs up and I hope to be home for Christmas.

Local Organization To Boost War Savings Certificates

Extensive Campaign to Start In Fall Months; Coleman Second Highest in June Receipts

Now that subscriptions for War Loans and War charities are beginning to die down the Federal War Savings committee is coming to the forefront with its campaign for war savings certificates. This committee has stayed in the background for the past few months to allow the Victory Loan a free hand in obtaining the largest possible subscription to the war effort.

Coleman committee, under the chairmanship of Fred Guerd, is again preparing to aid in the Dominion campaign. Last year a house-to-house canvass was made and a number of wage-earners were signed-up to subscribe periodically for certificates. This year the Federal committee has new ideas. One of them, and it may be adopted in Coleman, is to aim at the purchase of a unit of war equipment such as a plane, tank, Bren gun carrier, etc. the size of the population determining the piece of equipment to be purchased.

The receipts from District 10, which includes Coleman, for the month of June are as follows:

Bellevue $3,544, Blairmore $1,892, Cardston $404, Coleman $2,496, Cowley $32, Malcolm $1,844, Pincher Creek $254, Waterton Lakes $164, Balance of Territory $632.

Elks Hold Annual Picnic Sunday

Although, with not as large a crowd as usual, the B.P.O. Elks of Coleman held their annual picnic at a spot near the Crosses Nest Lake, an enjoyable time was had by all, softball and racing being the main events of the day. Refreshments were served and the kiddies were well filled with ice-cream and soda pop. The party broke up at about 6.30 Sunday evening and everybody tired, but happy, departed home.

WEDDINGS

RUDD—JAMES

Knox United Church in Calgary was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday evening July 26, when Irene only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. James of Coleman was united in marriage to Mr. William T. Rudd, only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Rudd of Rockyford, with the Rev. A. Huband officiating.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, the bride made a pretty picture in a Queen's blue sheer redingote with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses and lily of the valley. The bride's mother wore a smart navy and white ensemble, while Mrs. Rudd, mother of the groom was becomingly gowned in a rose dress with black accessories. Both wore a corsage of gardenias.

After the ceremony a reception was held in a private dining room at the York Hotel, where covers were laid for twenty-four guests. Sweet peas decorated the bridal table with a three-tiered wedding cake holding a place of honor. Mr. Robert Stone of Rockyford gave the toast to the bride, the groom responding. The happy couple left for a motor trip to Banff, Jasper and Sylvan Lake. For travelling the bride chose a rose dress with white accessories.

China To Aid Russia If Attack Is Made In The Far East

London.—Joseph Stalin and General Kai-Shek were said by a reliable source to have an understanding by which China would put "half a million or more soldiers in the field alongside Soviet forces in the event that Japan attacks Russia."

This source said he had been informed this was one reason Japan "chose Indo-China instead of a direct attack on Russia to aid her Axis partners."

Russia, it was stated, has been informed on all British discussions with China and the United States about Japan, and the Far Eastern position is declared to be in line with the British-Russian alliance.

Russia soon will be aided by Polish troops fighting the Germans under a Polish-Russian pact near conclusion, this source declared.

Poland's soldiers are those taken prisoner by the Russians when eastern Poland was occupied in 1939, and are estimated to number 200,000.

The Czech leader Eduard Benes announced in a broadcast that the Czech-Slovak government in exile was continuing negotiation with the Poles, adding that "a Soviet-Yugoslav agreement already has been reached and I hope soon that a Soviet-Polish agreement also will be reached."

Resigns C.N.R. Presidency

S. J. Hungerford Will Remain Chairman Of The Railway Board

Montreal.—W. H. Hobbs, secretary of the Canadian National Railways announced on behalf of the board of directors the resignation of S. J. Hungerford as president of the system.

The announcement said R. C. Vaughan, now vice-president in charge of purchases, stores and steamships, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Hungerford as president of the system, including the Canadian National (West Indies) Steamships, Limited, Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Limited, and other subsidiary and affiliated companies.

Mr. Hungerford will remain chairman of the board of the railway.

At the same time, it was announced that Mr. Hungerford has resigned as president of Trans-Canada Airlines and that H. J. Symington, K.C., of Montreal, a director of the organization since its inception, will succeed him as T.C.A. president.

See Japan's Move As A Threat To Adjacent Territory

Washington.—Branding Japan's move in French Indo-China as a threat to American security and a step toward further conquest, the United States hinted at strong counter-measures and warned Tokyo against a drive on Singapore, the Netherlands East Indies and the Philippines.

From President Roosevelt himself came some plain-talking about why the United States had not heretofore shut off all oil shipments to Japan—all in the past tense.

He told a civilian defence group that this policy was designed to make it unnecessary for Japan to go down to the East Indies for oil—and the president said "It has worked for two years" thus keeping war out of the Pacific.

But from his past-tense discussion of United States methods in seeking to keep peace in the South Pacific, some observers drew the inference that the president now might be ready to impose a full embargo on oil shipments to Japan and take other strong economic measures.

His informal remarks followed a blistering attack on Japan by Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state. Welles declared Japanese "occupation of military and naval bases in French Indo-China was primarily in preparation for 'more obvious movements of conquest in adjacent areas'."

The government's reason for not cutting off all oil shipments to Japan

Blast Axis Convoys

Three Ships Sunk Off Italian Island By Fleet Arm

Cairo.—The Royal Air Force announced that its bombers sank at least three ships from an Axis convoy off the Italian island of Pantelleria, in the channel between Sicily and Tunisia.

One of the Italian destroyers escorting the convoy of four medium-sized merchant ships, also was hit by an air-launched torpedo and damaged heavily at the stern, the R.A.F. communique said.

Two bombs were seen to hit a 7,000-ton ship and set it afire and the vessel later was observed submerged with its stern up while two destroyers stood by picking up survivors, the communique added.

Two hits also were scored on a 6,000-ton vessel, it said, and a 5,000-ton ship "which apparently was carrying munitions was hit by three bombs and immediately blew up and disappeared below the surface of the water."

Three air arm planes followed up the bomber attack later in the day when the convoy consisted only of one 7,000-ton tanker and another merchant vessel.

Two torpedoes hit the tanker, making it a total loss, it said, and another damaged the escorting destroyer.

Has Confidence In Russia

British Economist Says Communism Has Been Abandoned By Soviet

Montreal.—Sir George Paish, British economist, said in an interview here that he saw no world menace of Communism in the advent of a Russian victory over Germany.

"Communism has been abandoned by the Russians because it will not work," he said on his arrival here, "and he promised the Russians that Russia now is a co-operative state. Large wages are paid to those who are worth them. Small wages go to those who are not worthy of bigger. I am told that on the co-operative farms the workers all share in the profits at the end of the year."

Sir George said he believed Russia can defeat Germany. "Russia has a strong army, it has a very strong air fleet—as strong if not stronger than that of Germany. It has excellent navies in the Baltic and Black seas. The morale of the Russians is excellent."

"I believe that there is a good chance that they will hold the Germans. And what I do expect is that if winter comes the Germans will be beaten. That the Russians can do if they get assistance from the British Empire and the United States."

Nazi Uprisings

Fear Trouble Is Pending In South American Republics

Washington.—General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army, was reported to have told the house of representatives military committee that three South American nations are faced with possible Nazi uprisings.

Committee members, who decline to permit their names to be used, quoted Marshall to that effect. The general had appeared before the committee at a closed session to argue for the pending proposal to extend the term of service of draftees, national guardsmen and reserves.

The focal point of possible trouble in South America is Brazil, committee members said. Other centres of possible Nazi strength were mentioned as Bolivia and Colombia.

After hearing Marshall testify, Chairman Andrew May (Dem., Kentucky) of the house military committee told reporters that the international situation "is even more serious than the general public understands and is rapidly becoming more serious."

From the senate side of the capital, meanwhile, came word the army was prepared to revise its highly controversial proposal that it be given authority to send draftees, reservists and militiamen outside the western hemisphere.

Gen. Marshall told the house military committee in an open session that "forces hostile to us" had conducted "campaigns of distortion in South America for many months." He later answered questions of committee members for more than three hours in the executive session.

Look For Victory

Governor-General Addresses Gathering Of Newspaper Men

Toronto.—The Earl of Athlone assured a group of United States journalists the free peoples of the world will "utterly destroy" the enemy, laying the foundation for a "great new world of peace and happiness and the joy of young life."

In a speech enlivened by touches of humor, and ending on a rising cadence, the governor-general promised the South Carolina Press Association at its annual meeting that "we shall cling steadfastly to the tattered shreds of our civilization—and in the end we shall win."

Prefacing his remarks with a warm tribute to the "high standard of responsibility" displayed by the press of Canada and the United States, the governor-general expressed gratitude for the "unfailing courtesy" evident in "all my contacts with the members of your honorable profession."

He said that before he came to Canada little more than a year ago he was a little nervous about journalists on this side of the Atlantic.

"I had heard all sorts of stories about how they could make or mar the career of any public persons," he said.

All the stories he found to be "grossly exaggerated." He could not have wished for "greater kindness or consideration" than the press had displayed.

Lord Athlone drew a chuckle when he said there were many restrictions on what he could say in public, and for this reason, "I have decided to confine myself to what might be called governor-generalities."

CANADIAN SOLDIERS TURN TO ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Roads are vital arteries to any modern army, so Canadian troops in Britain, with no fighting to do but with lots of experience in highway construction, are hard at work showing the country how North America builds roads. With the latest in American-made construction machinery, the Canadian troops are shown, right, hard at work on what will soon be a smooth broad road across England's green fields. At left, Sapper E. S. Pratt of Ottawa "rides" a pneumatic drill as part of the road-making operations.

HIKES 100 MILES, ENLISTS

Pte. Edward Francis Garbette, Keg River, Alberta walked more than 100 miles to enlist in the Canadian army. He hiked from his home to the Peace River recruiting office and when a river interfered with his progress, he just stepped in and swam across. Now at No. 13A District Depot, at the Prince of Wales Armory, Edmonton, he is one of the most enthusiastic recruits.

Plane Is Christened

Lady Halifax Christens A New Plane The Vengeance

Los Angeles.—Lady Halifax, wife of the British ambassador to the United States, smashed a glass wand of oxygen across the propeller hub of a new dive bomber and declared, "I christen thee Vengeance—newest 'V' in Britain's campaign for victory."

The low-wing monoplane, camouflaged in brown and light green, roared into a takeoff then, spiraled to 5,000 feet and went into a deafening dive to 1,000 feet as 5,000 aircraft workers cheered.

The ceremony took place at the Vultee aircraft plant in Downey, near here. Said Lady Halifax, standing on a platform beside her husband:

"Vengeance is the name of this plane—a word that strikes a chill into all of us. But I prefer to think of its mission not as a ruthless, savage vengeance on a nation, but as the vengeance due a minority who would suppress and stifle common decency."

"I prefer to look on this Vengeance plane not as much as a weapon of destruction as one of construction, which by its very power cannot help but speed this war to a successful conclusion and once again restore peace among men and among nations."

Fund For Navy

Cheque Is Presented By New Zealand Soldiers In Far East

Alexandra.—Major Gen. B. C. Freyberg, V.C. commander-in-chief of the New Zealand forces in the Middle East and commander of Crete until the Nazis captured it, has presented a cheque for £650 ($3,870) to the commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean fleet, Sir Andrew Cunningham, for the Royal Navy Benevolent Association.

The fund was raised among the New Zealand soldiers in appreciation of the navy's courageous action in successfully carrying out the Crete evacuation in the face of tremendous and costly Nazi air attacks.

Steps Taken To Freeze All Japanese Assets In Canada

Ottawa.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced that "the necessary steps have been taken to prevent the withdrawal of assets in Canada belonging to residents of Japan."

The official statement, issued only a matter of hours after a similar one from President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N.Y., said that "no financial transactions affecting residents of Japan can be undertaken without the specific permission of the foreign exchange control board."

Similar control was established over the disposition of assets in Canada of residents of China at the request of the Chinese government.

But the prime minister's announcement said "it is understood that this measure will not disturb existing arrangements for the transfer of patriotic and benevolent remittance by Chinese residents in Canada."

One spokesman said it was his understanding that to all intents and purposes the assets in Canada of residents of Japan had been "frozen" for a week at least.

He said he believed that if a Japanese ship was at present in a Canadian port, it would not be allowed to leave as a result of the order forbidding withdrawal of assets from the Dominion.

Text of the prime minister's announcement follows:

"The prime minister announced that the necessary steps have been taken to prevent the withdrawal of assets in Canada belonging to residents of Japan."

"No financial transactions affecting residents of Japan can be undertaken without the specific permission of the foreign exchange control board."

"At the request of the Chinese government a similar measure of control will cover the disposition of assets in Canada of residents of China."

"It is understood that this measure will not disturb existing arrangements for the transfer of patriotic and benevolent remittance by Chinese residents in Canada."

Huge Plane Production

Magazine Estimates British And United States Ahead Of Germany

New York.—The authoritative magazine, American Machinist, estimates Great Britain and the United States were producing 32 per cent more airplanes a month than Germany and that Russia was running close to the German production mark.

"World production of planes, according to best available estimates," said the magazine, "is around 5,000 planes a month, divided thus:

"Germany, 2,500; Russia, 2,000; Britain, 1,800; United States, 1,500; Japan, 300; Italy, none except parts; and small amounts in British dominions and non-German Europe."

Acreage Reduction

Arthur Greenwood Praises Plan Adopted By Canada

London.—Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio in the Churchill government, praised Canada's wheat acreage reduction plan.

In a broadcast, he touched on wartime economic policies of producer nations and said Canada, "faced with a large surplus of wheat, adopted a measure of restricted acreage. . . . Her courageous policy should have a beneficial effect on the whole future balance of supply and demand in relation to the most essential of all foodstuffs."

Floods In Japan

Tokyo.—Thirty-four persons were reported dead and 26,000 homes flooded at Shizuoka as the result of a typhoon and rains which inundated crops, tied up rail service and left many thousands homeless in other parts of Japan. Thirty-eight other persons in Suizuoka prefecture were missing.

Set First Delivery Quota For Wheat On The New Crop

Winnipeg.—The Canadian wheat board announced that effective Aug. 1 the first delivery quota for wheat for the 1941-42 crop year will be five bushels an authorized acre. The board explained that by "authorized acre" it meant the wheat acreage specified by farmers when they reported total sown acreage to government officials under the acreage reduction plan.

Jammet storage conditions due to successive bumper western Canada wheat yields and loss of export markets because of the war led the Dominion government to ask farmers to reduce acreage planted to wheat in the spring. Farmers were offered bonuses of $4 an acre for former wheat land left to summerfallow and $2 an acre for planting land to coarse grains.

At the same time the government announced, it would take delivery during the 1941-1942 year, through the board, of only 320,000,000 bushels of wheat. Farmers again were guaranteed an initial price of 70 cents a bushel, basis No. 1 Northern at Port William or Vancouver, for their wheat.

The board also announced that for the present, no delivery quotas will be fixed on oats, barley, rye and flaxseed. It added that producers need not record deliveries of these grains in permit books.

Delivery quotas were placed on both wheat and coarse grains last year. The quotas started at five bushels to the seeded acre and were gradually increased as storage space became available until they were removed altogether—first from coarse grains, then from wheat.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

THE survival of the fittest has been a basic fundamental of life both in the human race and the animal kingdom. Hitler believes the survival of the fittest can best be exemplified by a display of brute force and playing the part of an international gangster. On the other hand Great Britain believes that the survival of the fittest can best be demonstrated by upholding the principles of the Democratic way of life. To uphold them she had to meet Hitler's challenge. The first Great War was said to have been fought to make the world safe for Democracy. It may have been just a step in that direction, but it did not take into account that a resurrected Germany would arise to try and impose Totalitarianism on Europe and subsequently the entire world, for the conquest of Europe would have paved the way and the desire for further conquests.

TO doubters who say "if we win" there should be only one admonition, and that is to tell them "we are going to win." Germany's most favorable opportunity to lick Britain was last year, when it was not anywhere as near prepared to resist invasion as it is to-day. It is quite possible that before long Britain will invade France and follow up the devastating attacks which the Royal Air Force has been inflicting on German and French armament works. The government of Britain backed by popular opinion is pledged to give the German people the same dose that they have inflicted on cities and towns of the United Kingdom. Revenge in order to break the morale of the German people will be inflicted, for they have had no mercy whatever on the British, either by land or by sea. Kindness is interpreted as a weakness by Hitler and his bloody gang, and when you have to deal with mad dogs, you do not go out with words of kindness, but with the heaviest club you can find. One cannot be a pacifist and at the same time a normal person if he would do otherwise.

IN a popular current magazine there was an incident recorded which was inspiring. It told of a man sitting beneath a tree wondering if he should embark on a certain venture. Whilst pondering it, he noticed a squirrel jump from one tree to the branch of another. He missed the branch he leaped for, but landing on a lower branch he worked his way to the branch he first aimed to reach. That squirrel took a chance. It so inspired the man that he decided he too would take a chance. It involved a trip abroad on a very slender sum of money. But he found that it not only repaid him much more than he ever anticipated, but added to the pleasure of his life.

SUCCESSFUL men invariably have taken chances. They were not content to plod in the same old rut. Here's another extract from the interesting bulletin issued by Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association which is worthy of reprinting:

"There are many failures! Often the failures know more than the successful people do. Often I have wondered about this. Now, I think I have the answer. The failures are receivers only. Into their minds they have poured facts, culture, ideas. Like a sponge, they have soaked-up knowledge. They are not creators but just recorders. Their minds act as channels through which ideas pass along to others—not as static storehouses. They do not merely read what others have thought and done—they have thoughts and ideas of their own and carry them into action. They live creatively. The mass of the people escape the pain and toil of creative effort merely by listening to the radio, watching the movies, reading the magazines and books. The successful people are the creators of these things! The mass of the people do the routine work, following the well-worn grooves of life. The successful men build the factories, design the products and create the jobs! Our destiny depends upon whether we are just receivers or givers in life. To which class do you belong?"

WAITING for things to happen may leave you waiting for a long time. The old saying that "everything comes to he who waits" is outworn in this competitive age. Things don't come to anyone; they have to be sought, and that is why enterprising people are often termed lucky. The luck they enjoy comes from their own efforts to make use of the shining hour while it is yet day, and not wait for someone else to knock the plums from the trees. That's how big business concerns are built from small beginnings.

ROADS MAIN ATTRACTION

(High River Times)

Quite a number of tourists, mainly from United States, but some also from other western provinces have dropped into the Times' office and spoken in very laudatory terms of our main highway from Waterton to Calgary. Because they have travelled some of our other roads, they appreciate the more the experience of entering a smooth surfaced, dust-less highway.

Now whether this road will stand up permanently is a matter of argument and contention. But at any rate at the present time there are many expressions of praise. Too often however, the praise is tempered with such remarks as "I travelled your road from ——— to ——— and it was terrible?"

So apparently if they enter at Waterton and keep right on the main highway, they have a happy memory of Alberta, and will return to their homes to encourage others to take the Alberta tour. If, however, they desire to explore our points of interest lying off the main highway, they will give us very much less favorable publicity.

This would point to the need of hard-surfaced highways from every point of entrance into Alberta. To evade this need is to discriminate against the cities and towns, along all routes which might benefit by tourist trade. It is also an inconvenience to the motoring public to have only one good entry.

There are dozens of attractive scenic points within this province, quite outside of the far-famed national parks. These could be developed enormously if there were ready and pleasant access. Until this is done, these are resources lying dormant and undeveloped.

In United States, there are 17 States which require that every dollar from motor taxes must be spent exclusively on roads, and the moral right of this law can be disputed by no government. This has not been the case in Alberta. Even in the period of most extensive road building, motorists were paying for more than they got. It is said that in this present fiscal year alone, motorists are contributing $3,000,000 more in motor taxes than is being spent on road building.

The appreciation so freely expressed for the comfort of travel on our main highway, brings realization of how our tourist trade would multiply if we had a network of hard-surfaced roads, connecting all cities and extending to all our beauty spots.

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME

This is from the Cranbrook Courier:
"We notice we have another crop of would-be 'Beau Brummels' who persist in bringing forth their pocket combs and touching up their beautiful locks in public. To add to their ridiculous actions, they generally wait until they have the floor of a restaurant before putting on their act, and in restaurants there are rooms provided for this."
"Now, who wants to eat a meal or have other refreshments with some young would-be dude scattering his loose hair, dandruff and germs all over the place? It's not only rude, but contrary to the public health act."

"One of the surest signs of 'Country Bumpkins' is to pull out a comb and put on his rude act in public. It displays very poor bringing up, a lack of good manners, and a breach to the laws of good etiquette."
"There is the type who with unusually long hair has to frequently throw his head up and back like a horse tossing its mane, to keep the hair out of its eyes."

OLD SOL BURNS

Taken in proper doses sunshine has a beneficial effect on one's body. Vitamin D, a necessary factor for the utilization of calcium and phosphorus by the body, is formed by the action of Summer sunlight on the egosterol ever present in the skin. To fully enjoy this great benefit of sunlight make your first sunbaths brief—just 10 minutes each the first day, 15 the second, and so on. Remember, it takes 16 days to safely tan a child and that their skin is more susceptible to burns than adults, especially blondes and red-heads. If you do have a bad burn, treat it as a burn and apply one of the many commercial tannic-acid jelly preparations now generally available.

Ribbentrop's Castle

Nazi War Lord Took Home From Austrian Nobleman

Goering and Goebbels built brand new ancestral castles. Ribbentrop discovered quite a charming and old one in one of Europe's beauty spots. This is Fuschl Castle on Lake Fuschl.

It lies about ten miles from Salzburg, Austria's loveliest town, and about as far east from it as Hitler's own castle in Berchtesgaden to the west. This is therefore a most suitable residence for the Herr Reichsminister and just the right sort of building to satisfy the dreams of future generations of Ribbentrops.

There was only one little snag. The castle belonged to somebody else, who had no desire to part with it. It belonged in fact to an Austrian nobleman, Gustav von Remitz, who lived there with his family. This gentleman had never played a conspicuous part in politics, though as chairman of the local branch of the Austrian Monarchists he had organized the customary traditional celebrations. This was his only offence. But it was enough. He was imprisoned in the concentration camp at Dachau. After a little while his wife received news of his death.

Fuschl Castle was free! One of Ribbentrop's first guests there was his Italian colleague, Count Ciano, who is not likely to be afraid of ghosts. The Voice of Austria.

Good Story About The Puppet Quisling Comes From Norway

Norwegian patriots have been getting much amusement from passing around this anecdote.

It seems that puppet Quisling paid a visit to a mental hospital in Oslo and asked one of the patients if he knew who Norway's greatest men were.

"Of course! There was Ibsen and Grieg, Bjornson and Nansen—all very good friends of mine, by the way."

"Yes, yes," said Quisling impatiently. "But don't you know who I am?"

"No, I don't."

"Well, I am Vidkun Quisling!"

"I never heard of him."

"What? I tell you I am Vidkun Quisling, the greatest Norwegian since Harald the Fair-Haired!"

At this the inmate soothingly patted the puppet on the shoulder.

"I sympathize with you, old man. That's how it began with me, too."

Regimented Styles

New Plan In Britain May Have Mixed Reception

A report from London, Eng., reveals that standardized apparel for men will be placed on sale this fall, and that a similar policy in respect to clothing for women and children will follow.

This news is received with mixed feelings. In the first place, it will be a surprise to many to learn that male attire hasn't always been standardized; and, in the second, it will be interesting to learn who in Britain will be daring enough to set the regimented styles for women, and thereby invite that famed fury before which even a blitz would pale.—Windsor Star.

Might Be Profitable

If Private Owner Would Keep Books On His Car

It would be a good thing for the private car owner if he, too, were to keep books on his car, giving it a certain life, charging monthly depreciation against it, and then trying by extra good care for the machine to lengthen its average life period and thus build up a bonus for himself. By this method, too, he would soon be able to figure the moment when it would be better to trade the car in than to begin rebuilding it. It doesn't take much effort to keep tab, and in the long run it is profitable.

Prisoners Receive Parcels

Ten Thousand Food Parcels Sent Each Week To British War Prisoners By Red Cross

Red Cross headquarters in Canada reports that postcards from German prison camps have been arriving in hundreds lots for the past month. Each card represents the receipt of a Canadian Red Cross prisoner of war parcel by a British or Canadian prisoner of war, and is signed by the prisoner himself. The Red Cross is jubilant over this proof that the 10,000 food parcels packed each week for British prisoners are reaching the right hands. The Canadian Society is spending a million and a half dollars a year to feed British prisoners of war in Germany and it is great satisfaction to know that the gifts are going forward regularly.

Besides the postcards which are included in every box of food, Red Cross has also received an air mail letter from Germany signed by Brigadier C. Nicholson who is the senior British officer in Oflag VII C. Oflag VII C. is one of the German camps that has given officials much cause for complaint and it is heartening to know that Canadian food is helping the British soldiers bear the conditions there. Brigadier Nicholson's men had received from the Canadian Red Cross, and he asked that all Red Cross workers be notified how much the boxes were appreciated and how much they were enjoyed.

Millions Of Pounds Are Being Shipped From Canada

Doing without cheese has probably been among the bitterest of blows to the British, so it is good to know that since the beginning of April Canada has sent 15,000,000 pounds of it to the old land and about one hundred million more pounds are scheduled for shipment in the next nine months.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

AUGUST 3

PAUL PREACHES FAITH IN CHRIST

Golden text: As it is written, But the righteous shall live by faith. Romans 1:17.

Lesson: Romans 3:21-31; 5:1, 2; Galatians 3:1-26.

Devotional reading: Romans 8:31-39.

Explanations and Comments.

Salvation by Faith, Romans 3:21-31. The great theme of Paul's Epistle to the Romans is stated in 1:17, "the righteous shall live by faith." In the chapters before our text Paul shows how desperately mankind everywhere needs forgiveness for all have sinned, Gentiles and Jews alike, and have incurred the judgment of God who will render to every man according to his works. "And reckonest thou this, O man, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?"

"How can a man be right with God? How can one who is guilty of sin be forgiven, pardoned, declared righteous, and regarded as though his sins had never been committed? No more important question possibly could be asked, and in all the Bible probably there is no more complete and satisfying answer than in these words of Paul. He has recorded here the very essence of the gospel which he desired to preach at Rome, the very sum and substance of the good news which this epistle set forth" (C. R. Erdman).

Having declared that the salvation is from God, Paul next explains that it is through faith in Jesus Christ that mankind can appropriate this blessing, mankind everywhere, for there is no distinction here. The whole world is in need of salvation, for all have sinned, and they continually fall short of the glory of God, the approbation from God.

Being justified [declared righteous, forgiven] freely [as a gift] by God's grace [favor], through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus [through the atonement of Christ], whom God set forth [sent], to a propitiation, through faith, in his blood, to show his righteousness because of the passing over of the sins done aforetime, in the forbearance of God.

Late Earl Of Suffolk

Cockney Tells About His Work In Bomb Disposal Squad

Behind a few lines published in the official London Gazette, announcing the posthumous award of the George Cross to the late Earl of Suffolk, lay the story of Britain's most unusual bomb disposal squad.

The 35-year-old earl, his 28-year-old secretary and six other members of the squad were killed by a delayed-action bomb last May. As a 60-year-old cockney known only as Pop, who had followed the earl on many a successful job told last May how the crew worked, but publication of Pop's story was not then permissible.

"It's no: often you see a man with a 300-year-old title out diggin' for bombs," he said. "But the young earl went right after 'em."

"He had a pretty secretary. She waited in the car at what they thought was a safe distance. He would string a telephone line from the car to the bombs and dictate technical notes about the job while he worked."

The earl's cold-blooded interest in bombs was largely scientific. He was chief field research and experimental officer at the ministry of supply and in that capacity collected much data for the use of future bomb disposal squads.

"When he was out on a job he always smoked a cigarette in a long holder," Pop continued.

"He'd keep on smoking until he was almost up to the bomb and then would hand it to somebody and say, 'Hold this a minute' and tackle the bomb."

"You never could tell by watching him that he was playing with a death. He talked as he worked, dictating fairly fast."

"He always told us that if anything happened to him he wanted others to have the benefit of his experience. He was a real gentleman, he was."

Moose And Fox Seen On Green At Prince Albert National Park

Fox and moose enliven the 18-hole golf course in Prince Albert National Park, Saskatchewan, reports the park superintendent. Two foxes are seen regularly on the course, one of them with a litter of playful pups. A cow moose and her calf have also been observed frequently by golfers.

Moose and elk appear to be more numerous throughout the park this year, and many of them with their young are seen on and near the park highway.

Health LEAGUE presents TOPICS OF CANADA VITAL INTEREST

YOUR VACATION FOR HEALTH

Summer is a period of recuperation from winter's ills. Plan your vacation and week-ends so that you get the maximum of fresh air and sunshine in enjoyable doses. Relax from the care of work amid pleasant surroundings. Vacations should restore health, sometimes they endanger it, simply because risks are invited or are not recognized. Watch your food supplies, the sources of your milk and water. Don't stir too long with "old soil" or get familiar with poison ivy.

Whilst drinking water supplies have been improved generally, it is not safe to use water from any old source in out of places. Pollution may be present only at infrequent intervals but why take a chance. Usually a fire is available and where this is so, water for drinking or washing raw vegetables or cooking utensils should be brought to the boil before using. If when "vacation woods" a fire is in progress or out of the question the simplest method of purifying your water is to chlorinate it. Vacationers or residents who do not conveniently secure a chlorine outfit may employ the following method: Prepare a solution by adding half a teaspoonful of fresh chlorine to one pint of water. Use one teaspoonful of this solution to ten gallons of water to be purified, 36 drops to one gallon or 9 drops to one quart. Let the water stand at least 15 minutes before doing. The solution should be freshly prepared and used within 24 hours. Tablets of calcium hypochlorite and ampules of the dry powder can be procured for this purpose and are the most satisfactory since they do not lose their strength if properly sealed.

Food supplies need watching, see that they are properly stored at low temperatures. Do not allow food supplies to get hot by day and cool off slightly on successive days. Maintain them at an even low temperature. Where ice is used see that the source is reliable.

If you cannot buy pasteurized milk then pasteurize it yourself by either one of the following methods. If you have no thermometer, heat the milk in a double boiler and just bring it to the boil and then pour it into a bottle with a suitable thermometer, instead of boiling the milk, heat it in the double boiler to over 143 degrees Fahrenheit. Do not let the milk touch the stove or where it will remain at that temperature for half an hour. Cool quickly to 45 degrees Fahrenheit, then ready for use for storing on ice or in the refrigerator.

Taken in proper doses sunshine has a beneficial effect on one's body. Vitamin D, a necessary factor for the utilization of calcium and phosphorus by the body, is formed by the action of summer sunlight on the ergosterol in the cells of the skin. To fully enjoy this great benefit of sunlight make your first sunbaths brief—just 10 minutes on the first day. You are not immune to poison ivy; no one is. As with all allergies, some people are more sensitive than others. The more poison the milky, oily sap which is slow to evaporate and may remain on your clothes and boots long after your walk through the bush.

There is no sure cure, nor is there a sure preventive treatment except the best of all methods, detour the plants. If you have been exposed to the plants, rather your whole body with a good soap, rinse and repeat. Thus you wash away the oil, forestalling or minimizing irritation. Soothing, protective lotions, and compresses are standard treatment; they merely give relief. Gardeners and others who must work near poison ivy are recommended to smear all exposed surfaces with vanishing cream mixed with 10% sodium picramide—freshly made. Any drugstore can make this cream and the protection lasts for three hours, then it must be washed off and a fresh application made.

A few words on how not to worry might not be inappropriate at this time. Some people persist in taking pet office worry with them on their vacation. Don't Worry is the most futile of all bad habits. It can do no good. It can cause definite harm. It reacts on the nervous system, causing indigestion and insomnia, which in turn causes more worry and so a vicious circle goes on. Train yourself to avoid pet office worry. It is rather than fretting about what it is not. Learn to relax—it is the only means of treating the vicious circle. With rest and relaxation should come less nervous irritability, better sleep, better digestion and fewer worries. This is the only way to break the circle. That's what you need. You are really for. While you can, Rest and Relax. You owe it to yourself your business, and to your country.

AMERICAN GIRLS FALL FOR NICK'S RED CROSS APPEAL IN BANFF

Anne and Marjory McLeod, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Colin Gordon McLeod of Providence, R.I., solicited by "Nick," the Red Cross dog of Banff in the Canadian Rockies, give their silver coins to the R.I. Proudly wearing a Red Cross medal on his upper harness, this pedigreed Alsatian has so far collected over $400 from tourists on C.P.R. trains during the 10-minute stop in Banff. A Banff tradesman, Ted Evans, is Nick's master, and he can bring the dog down only on Sundays, having his own living to get during the week; but he is sure that Nick will pass the thousand-dollar mark by autumn.

Nick "speaks" a lively thanks for every contribution. He was fooled only once, when he waited in vain for a click from a folded $20 bill deposited by a New York lady; but when he saw his master's beaming face he burst into a speech of record length and enthusiasm. The New York lady then promised to repeat the operation when she leaves Banff in the fall.—Canadian Pacific Railway photo.

CHAPTER XVII.

The first weeks at the club El Mexicano were like some horrible nightmare from which Devona prayed hourly to be awakened mercifully. The elaborate Spanish costumes did help to bolster the natural shyness that made her every appearance torturous. But she loathed being stared at, flattered with, flattered. She loathed the torchy rumba music the Troubadours specialized in. She loathed dancing with bold strangers who held her too close, their hands hot on her bare arm.

But, resolutely, each evening she shed her own fastidious self with her street clothes and stepped into the costume and the personality of the Dona Carlotta that Jose Macias' patrons were beginning to applaud vigorously now. They liked her deep-throated contralto. They liked the fiery—sometimes daring—love songs Manuel had taught her.

"You're doing all right," Macias told her after the first month. "I'm very pleased. Next week I'll put your name up in the lights out in front, too."

"I'm glad you're pleased," she said simply. It was something to know she could go on paying her rent. At least for a while. Just how much longer she could go on playing this cat-at-the-mouse-hole game of waiting with Macias she didn't know. Because, of course, sooner or later, he'd stop playing his role of benign employer and show his true interest in her. Smiling, smooth, ever courteous, he had not yet offered to step past the limits of their employer-employee relationship. Not yet.

But that he would and that her job depended on her skill in postponing that dread moment, Devona knew only too well. Every instinct told her his casual pressure on her arm, his extreme kindness and consideration were only preliminaries. That, and Manuel's sly mockery were warning enough.

"There's the boy friend looking for you, sweetie pie," he would mutter when, in the midst of a rehearsal, Macias would leave his office, wander into the big deserted dining room to listen.

"He's not the boy friend," Devona answered after the first time.

"No?" Manuel lifted skeptical eyebrows. "Maybe not yet."

Furious, Devona had waited until Macias was called away. Then she'd challenged him. "What do you mean?"

Manuel calmly let a series of runs trickle down the keyboard while he looked at her steadily. "Don't tell me you don't know why you're here, Miss Innocence?"

"To sing—of course."

"Sure. But that's not all. Macias likes his girl friends young and pretty—and stand-offish at first! You should have seen the one just before you. Freda Camp her name was. Poor Freda. Pretty as paint and peroxide could make her and nuts about Macias. He was nuts about her until he found out how dippy she was for him."

"Then he got bored and gave her the gate."

"How interesting," Devona stiffened angrily. "Well—I'm no—no Freda. Please understand that I'm here to sing—and that's all. Mr. Macias has been kind enough to—"

"Sure," Manuel agreed lazily. "He always starts out being very kind. Watch him when he gets into a sweat about something though. And—"

—with an infuriating little pat on her shoulder, "Don't get sore, kid. I'm only trying to tip you off. Anybody can see you're not in his class. Now, want to run through this number again?"

Devona let it go at that but secretly Manuel's crude warning only added weight to the burden of her own fears. She must start looking for work elsewhere—preparing some alternative when Macias decided to break her contract. As break it he would if he really wanted to. The only person that document bound was herself probably.

And the money poured in. Some times Devona wondered how one place of business could make so much profit. Sometimes she suspected that Macias' carefully casual references to his handsome profits might be mere braggadocio.

Still, his expensively tailored suits, his three cars, his valet, his swank uptown address at the fashionable Louis Quinze Apartment Hotel—all that cost money.

Then once, by accident, she saw a bank statement—a balance running into five figures. His ruthlessness paid him well, she thought, wryly, and then tried to forget about it.

But Macias himself wouldn't let her. That very evening he called her to his office just before the dinner crowd began to arrive. He smiled as she came in—studied her deliberately.

"I like that costume the best," he said, his glance travelling from the deep red rose she wore tucked behind her ear, down each ruffled crimson satin flounce to the tips of the matching slippers.

"Do you?" she murmured, wondering what lay behind this flattering shower. After all, she'd worn the outfit many times. He'd picked it out himself.

"I wanted to ask your advice, Dona," he went on, blandly.

"My advice?" she echoed, puzzled.

He turned to his desk, pulled a big box from the drawer. "Yes. What do you think of this?" And, opening the package, tossed a cloud of black lace into her lap.

Carefully Devona shook out the soft, cobwebby lace. "A mantilla?"

He nodded, bit off the end of his cigar, spat it expertly into an empty jardiniere.

"Why it's exquisite," examining its rich pattern. "And all hand done. Why this—?" She looked at him.

"This is a museum piece!"

Macias turned back toward the packing box again. "And what about these?" He laid a jeweled Spanish comb, a matching pendant, a black lace fan in her lap.

Georgous they were. Blood-red rubies against ivory so intricately carved it looked like white foam in suspension. "Why these are magnificent!"

"Put them on!" he ordered, quietly. For an instant she met those steady, black eyes. Defiance mushroomed as she read his cool determination.

Was he going to make this the showdown? Then common sense caught up with her. Why defy him over an incident that might well be disguised as a matter of policy? Not that she wasn't perfectly aware of his motive. Still, she smiled sweetly.

"Oh, I see. To make my costume complete," she said and, turning to the long mirror behind the desk, thrust the deep-pronged comb into a cluster of curls, draped the handsome black mantilla over it. "That looks much more authentic, doesn't it?"

He smiled slowly, accepted her make-believe. "I thought it would improve the outfit. And now, the locket."

With clumsy fingers, he fastened the delicate chain around her throat.

"That ought to fascinate my public," she laughed, still determined to carry the pretense through. "And may I leave these in your private safe after the last show? They're much too valuable to be lying around my hotel room."

His eyes lagged at her as he nodded. "Yes, if you prefer."

The danger thus skirted for the moment, still it left her a little breathless. This, she knew, was only the beginning!

"It must be nearly time for my numbers, now," she said, edging toward the door. "Was there anything else?"

He waved his cigar by way of dismissal. "Not now. I'll be out to hear you in a minute." His slow smile did nothing to quiet the frantic racing of her heart.

And either the charm of the lovely mantilla or the troubled emotions churning within herself gave new sparkle to her performance. Her audience responded with real enthusiasm, applauded until Manuel muttered a teasing. "The girl's a bit. Come on, fellows, give 'em another chorus."

Another chorus and still another. And yet they clamored for more. Flushed, thrilled by the response, Devona gave Manuel the signal for the next encore. Then even as she opened her lips to begin the popular Mexican folk-song she saw him!

A tall man, familiarly broad-shouldered, lean-jawed, a calm poised carriage, a swinging stride that could belong to no one else. Dale Brasher! For an instant the note of song died in her throat. Not Dale! Not tonight!

He was following a head waiter through the crowded room to a small table at the side. So far he hadn't seen her. And when he did!

"She'd known this had to happen, of course. Eventually he'd come. Maybe, she prayed fervently, he wouldn't recognize her. Maybe he—"

"Hey!" Manuel beside her muttered low. "What's the matter? I've given you that introduction three times."

"Once more, please," and drew a long breath. Then, deliberately leading the way so that the Troubadours would serenade patrons on the opposite side of the room from where Dale sat alone, she began again.

Macias beckoned her, peremptorily. The Troubadours turned to obey that summons.

"Just you, Dona. I have a little surprise for you." He took her arm, nodded to the three musicians to go on. "An old friend of yours, I believe."

Deliberately, he was leading her to the table where Dale sat. Stealing herself, Devona noticed her chin higher, met the surprise in Dale's glance, as, stumbling, he pushed back his chair, stood up.

"An old friend of yours, Brasher," Macias said, wickedly, all smiling friendliness while he watched them. "Miss Faubourne is my Dona Carlotta, you know."

For an instant their eyes met. Then, her face a perfect mask for the turbulence seething within, she sank carelessly into the chair opposite him, saying quietly, "Good evening, Mr. Brasher."

World Pattern

Reason Should Be The Solution Of International Difficulties

Hon. Leighton McCarthy, the Canadian minister, said that Canada and United States had established a "new and unique type of internationalism" which should be the pattern for a permanent world peace.

In an address before a meeting of the South Carolina society and the South Carolina Press Association, Mr. McCarthy said peoples of the two nations inter-marry, business houses are organized on an international scale "without thinking of themselves as operating in a foreign field," and we "take part in each other's business parleys as though we were one country." Then he added:

"Yet none of this constant intermingling tempts either of our peoples to instruct the other on how a civil government and its jurisdiction should be set up or administered. This condition is as natural to us as rain, but it is incomprehensible to dictator nations."

"Our example, now over a century old and constantly more fixed in its result, gives the lie to those who protest that force not reason must be the ultimate solvent of international relations."

More than 10,000,000 American workers use automobiles to get to and from their jobs.

Food For Canada's War Mills

With Canada's war industries humming into ever increasing production, more and more scrap iron is being gathered throughout the nation, and patriotic communities from coast to coast are operating salvage depots. Belgian War Veteran

Claims To Have Two Backbones And Alters Height At Will

Charles Plancke, 68-year-old Belgian war veteran, a man who claims to have two backbones, plodded up Talbot street in St. Thomas, Ont., drawing behind him his small two-wheel cart which holds all his early belongings. A man who is never the same height on successive days can change his height from less than five feet to almost seven feet, a will.

Whether he has two backbones, or not, he is certainly an unusual character. "I was struck by lightning in Belgium during the war, now I have two backbones," he told a reporter, his voice carrying a strong European accent. "How tall are you?"

He was asked. "Me, how tall? I'm never same height on any two days. When storm comes I get small, I'm afraid of lightning. But I make myself big or little, whatever I want."

He produced a small iron hoop, about 16 inches in diameter. "I crawl through that easy," he said. The reporter scanned his broad shoulders dubiously. "Sure, I crawl through that anytime." Then from the luggage of his two-wheel cart he produced a small wire cage, about 16 inches square on the base, about 20 inches high. "I crawl into that and pull lid down over my head."

Again the reporter scanned his massive frame dubiously. Plancke was well over six feet that day.

"It would be a sight worth seeing to see you do it," said a bystander, one of a large crowd who had gathered where the Plancke had parked his cart.

Then Plancke's commercial outlook made itself evident. "Huh, yeah," he exclaimed. "But everybody wants to see free show. I don't make my show right here on main street."

He did not say whether he would stay in St. Thomas; instead he kept muttering about people wanting to see free shows. Plancke had put on his show in Port Stanley the night before and had tramped up from Port between dawn and 11:30, he claimed. A strong walker for an elderly man, he wore only a pair of winter rubbers on his feet. "Feet needs lots of room when you walk all day," he exclaimed. He said he would be following the fall fair when they started, carrying his hoop and wire cage.

For those dubious onlookers who doubted his ability to make himself tall or short at will, Plancke stood beside a man on the sidewalk and extended his arm out level so that it passed across the man's shoulder. Then he twisted his waist and shoulders for a moment, bent over, and then pulled himself erect, holding the arm out again. It was now about eight inches over the man's head.

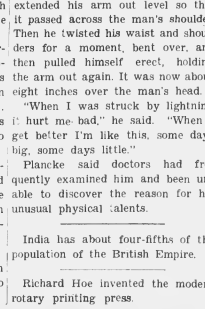

"When I was struck by lightning I hurt me bad," he said. "When I get better I'm like this, some days big, some days little."

Plancke said doctors had frequently examined him and been unable to discover the reason for his unusual physical talents.

DURHAM CORN STARCH

Wanted Britain's Help

Kaiser Had Idea Of Staking Claim In South America

It is interesting at this moment, says A. L. K. in the London Times, to recall the proposal made in 1901 at Osborne by the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm II to a group of British statesmen. The details are given by Lord Middleton in "Records and Reactions." Briefly, it was that Britain should help Germany to stake out a territorial claim in South America. If Germany and England had an alliance, the United States could not prevent him (the Kaiser) from landing troops there, for the British Fleet would then be on Germany's side. Once the German troops were there he could deal with "the States" and get together a German population of 500,000. "You keep the States off me, I'll keep Russia off you," the Kaiser concluded. The Kaiser returned to the same theme when Lord Middleton attended the German manoeuvres in the following year, showing that the idea was no mere sudden impulse.

Lord Salisbury refused to take the proposal seriously and did not even report it to the cabinet.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

BENEVOLENCE

To feel much for others, and little for ourselves; to restrain our selfishness, and exercise our benevolent affections, constitutes the perfection of human nature.—Adam Smith.

Benevolent feeling ennobles the most trifling actions.—Thackeray.

The place of charity, like that of God, is everywhere.—Quarles.

Sweeter than the balm of Gilead, richer than the diamonds of Golconda, dear as the friendship of those we love, are justice, fraternity, and Christian charity.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Do not wait for extraordinary circumstances to do good actions: try to do ordinary situations.—Richer.

Charity is never lost; it may meet with ingratitude, or be of no service to those on whom it was bestowed, yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the heart of the giver.—Middletown.

Good Example For Others

New Gasoline Regulations Are Taken Seriously By Alberta Farmer

Antoine Devaux, Cheadle, Alta., farmer takes the new gasoline regulation seriously.

Mr. Devaux, driving his light delivery truck from Red Deer to Calgary, was stopped on the road by a Macleod, Alta., motorist who had run out of gasoline. He wanted a lift to the next gasoline station.

Mr. Devaux reminded him that no one was allowed to sell gas before 7 o'clock in the morning. On the back of his truck, Mr. Devaux had a drum of gasoline but he didn't let him have any of that, either.

Mr. Devaux had read in the papers the suggestion that farmers might be tempted to "bootleg" to motorists the gasoline they had for their own use and Mr. Devaux wasn't going to do anything unpatriotic like that, he said.

The farmer hitched the Macleod man's car to his own and towed him to Calgary. Leaving him conveniently parked in front of a gasoline station, Mr. Devaux drove off with the drum of gasoline still sitting, untouched, in the back of his truck.

King Edward VII. Went To Every One He Could

It is characteristic of King George that he should have enrolled himself for fire-watching. The gesture would have pleased his grandfather, King Edward VII., who went to every fire he could see and often added to the anxieties of the officer in command by donning helmet and lending a hand in fighting the flames, states a London correspondent of the Ottawa Journal, who remembers an old Fleet street journalist telling that he once was watching a big conflagration in the city when the then Prince of Wales sauntered up and asked him what building it was. They talked together for a bit and then the Prince offered him a cigar.

"Aren't you going to smoke it?" he asked later. Well, sir, I know you are, and I was going to keep it as a memento," was the smiling reply. "Oh, you smoke it and keep that as a memento," said the Prince, taking a monogrammed case from his pocket and handing it over to him.

Most People Wrong

Will people ever learn to sing the National Anthem properly? The last line is "God save the King," not "God save our King," yet it is safe to suggest nine of every ten persons make it "our King" instead of "the King," when singing the National Anthem.
